Why start here?

As we have a number of students entering the course from different musical backgrounds (including different exam boards at GCSE) an intensive music theory course is delivered covering: Pitch notation, Clef reading, Key Signatures, Cadences, Intervals and Transposition. This ensures students have the necessary theoretical knowledge to approach A level study. Alongside this, students are introduced to the periods of Music within Western Classical Tradition and the evolution of Popular Music. Students then study the set works of Stevie Wonder & Joni Mitchell. They will be introduced to good essay writing in Music using writing frames initially to prepare for the first review paper.

Additionally students study a course on Chorales to equip students with a secure knowledge of harmony to develop their composition skills.

Why move onto these units?

Students will have a firm grasp of part of the AOS 1 and 2 Set Works and will continue to work through the remaining Set Works. Students will be encouraged to apply their theoretical and stylistic observations to the subsequent Set Works to identify 'landmarks' in the musical styles of the named artists. Regular Listening questions of '10 marker' style questions are used to develop aural competence. They will develop their essay writing skills through further named artists with an element of comparison across the artists. The composition lessons on Chorales will develop into practice Chorale exercises for students to become confident in this Unit. They will also trial different composition briefs to start to develop compositional preferences for the free composition coursework.

Why move onto these units?

Students will have a firm grasp of most of the AOS 1 and 2 Set Works and will continue to work through the remaining Set Works to complete before the end of the year.

Students will move onto the Free Composition element of the course. Using the techniques and research into the styles they want to compose in they will create a brief for their coursework. Students will be encouraged to use the Summer break to develop their ideas creatively.
