Anything else I need to know?

GCSE Business provides a skill in understanding the wider world of economics, politics, legislation, technology and social issues. Business is of value to everyone as you are all going to be part of the workplace and all of you are consumers.

Within the scheme of work, you will also have the opportunity to work in groups on ‘the Apprentice’ style tasks which will help you develop your employability skills such as communication and time management. These projects will also involve links with real life local businesses.

Complementary Courses

Business mainly complements other humanities subjects, in particular Geography. Beyond GCSE, Sandbach School offers Business and Economics A level. This can lead you on to a Business or Economics related degree subject at different Universities, as well as top apprenticeship schemes.

Possible Career Paths

Marketing, Retail Management, Finance and Accounting, Human Resources, Production and Operations, Economics and Public Relations.

It could also give you the skills and confidence to perhaps one day run a business of your own.
