Sandbach School History Curriculum: A story of intolerance

Year 9 History Curriculum Sequence

Intent: Year 9 history pupils will look at serious historical social and political issues and events which still have relevance and significance in the Modern World by improving knowledge and challenging stereotypes and preconceptions. Looking in particular at intolerance in different contexts, pupils should be better armed to understand this in their time and mature enough and well armed enough to recognize and challenge it.

Cohort 1 The chosen modules look at the issue of intolerance across different time periods and contexts. These are important stories to tell and they work at this point of the Curriculum as the pupils mature they are more able to address complex and challenging issues.		Why this module? We have chosen Early Elizabeth as a continuation of the theme of tolerance, in this case a female monarch, religious tolerance, royal versus parliamentary power etc	Why this module? This is the logical chronological continuation in the study of Early Elizabeth looking at the challenges to a female monarch, threats and plots and relationships with other countries
